AGENCY CONTACT MEMORANDUM #2011-0602

To: Agency CIOs, Technical Contacts

From: Steve Rucker, Commissioner
Commonwealth Office of Technology

Date: June 28, 2011

Subject: LeMay named Chief Information Security Officer

Commonwealth Office of Technology is proud to announce that Katrina LeMay has been appointed to serve as the state's Chief Information Security Officer (CISO).

In announcing the appointment today, COT Commissioner Steve Rucker said the CISO plays an important role within the enterprise by establishing risk management processes, deploying risk mitigation strategies, and working collaboratively with other agencies to secure the data of the Commonwealth. He said Ms. LeMay will work with the IT community and non-IT business managers throughout the Commonwealth to build support for enterprise security practices and increase security awareness.

Mrs. LeMay replaces Rucker in the CISO role. He simultaneously managed the duties of that office on an interim basis while serving as COT commissioner.

Mrs. LeMay has held various IT leadership positions at Commonwealth Office of Technology and the former Kentucky Revenue Cabinet. Her duties have focused on project management, business and technical analysis, and application development. She was a key player in the development of COT's Systems Development Life Cycle (SDLC) and project management methodologies, and has participated in several broad-based COT initiatives. She studied business administration and computer science at Kentucky State University and has more than 20 years of service in state government.
